Biography

Erb Mon is a painter and muralist who comes from a background in photography. He began intervening in public space by pasting his images onto the streets, where he came into contact with urban art and became a pioneer of paste-up in Barcelona.

Creating in public space became his priority, and he gradually moved away from photography to focus on mural painting.

After several years devoted exclusively to muralism, he moved towards contemporary art through painting on paper and canvas. He experimented with digital painting and noise music, considering these two stages as classrooms that expanded his approach to painting.

Nature, metaphysics and minimalism are vital influences on both his life and his work.

He is currently exploring what he calls "The Poetry of Things." Through observation, he has come to understand that living is a poetic act, and he began creating from this premise. He sees the artwork as an action that goes beyond the object.
